“ When we had cows, I would go to work at 3 a.m and take a. Real for breakfast at Jack's Never In about 6. Earnie was often the only other person there. He didn't know me and I didn't know him but we'd say good morning and pass the newspaper back and forth. This went on just about every morning until Jack's changed owners. Seriously, it was several years before we bothered to introduce ourselves! In recent years I'd run into him here and there for a beer and some good conversation. He will be missed.
